MANERI / KALMANOVITCH / JACOBSON / OSGOOD Variations On No Particular Theme - Part 2

NEW ALBUM OUT

Lo and behold, the second and final part of the diptych from the unusual free improvising quartet featuring two New York-based viola players Mat Maneri & Tanya Kalmanovitch, and Copenhageners Tomo Jacobson on double bass & Kresten Osgood on drums, is finally here! This time, we enter into a darker, fiercer, seemingly telepathic exchange - a powerful finale to an unprecedented musical journey.

Selected press quotes for 'Variations On No Particular Theme - Part 1':

"A mode of collective expression in service of finding a unified voice." (BBC RADIO 3 - Corey Mwamba - UK)

'Best of 2021: Honorable Mentions' & featured in 'Picks of the Week' (Avant Music News - USA)

"A delightful string play, contrapuntal, abstract, and especially vivid." (Jazz Special #11, 2021 - Allan Sommer - Denmark)

"This multinational group may be an atypical string-oriented quartet, yet the multiple textures offered for sound explorations push aside any ambiguity about its role." (Musicworks Magazine #141 - Ken Waxman - Canada)

"An interesting study in bold, yet even-tempered music making." (All About Jazz - Mark Corroto - USA)

"Unquestionable Masterpiece" (Maciej Lewenstein - Polish Jazz Recordings and Beyond - Poland)

Mat Maneri needs no introduction, he's probably the most respected and celebrated jazz and improv string player alive. Tanya Kalmanovitch is a Canadian violist, ethnomusicologist, the Associate Professor at The New School in NYC. She and Mat released in 2016 an insanely beautiful, and highly acclaimed duo album 'Magic Mountain'. Kresten Osgood is one of the most versatile drummers we know, who played with pretty much anybody from Roscoe Mitchell, and Paul Bley, to Brad Mehldau, and Kurt Rosenwinkel. Last but not least, Tomo Jacobson, the youngest of the four, with over 30 albums to his credit has proven himself to be an adventurous improviser on numerous occasions over the years.
